Suade will be visiting Tranby College as Artists in Residence with the generous help of the Emma Cartwright Trust & the City of Rockingham from Monday 13th February until Thursday 24th February.

Suade is a bit of a cappella oddity. When people first see these five rowdy Australian blokes, they tend to assume they're venue security, lost sports fans or some kind of male modelling troupe.

But when they step up to the microphones, expectations are quickly shattered with one of the most lively, cheeky and downright fun vocal shows in the world. Teetering on the edge of good taste, these natural born performers can raise the roof with a crowd-pleaser in one breath and then send chills down every spine in the room with a heartfelt love song the next.

"Do you ever get that feeling, as you are watching or listening to a great performer, when your heartbeat increases and the bottom of your stomach falls away? Suade can make you feel that way for the whole time they're on stage. Apart from my aching smile and laugh muscles, the hardest part about this show was picking a stand out moment."
Adele Scott, Breaking Even Theatre Reviews.
